Contents

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS ix

PROLOGUE: HOW IT ALL BEGAN xiii

WHAT EXACTLY IS TASTE, AND WHY IS IT IMPORTANT? 1
The basic tastes: From seven to four to five and possibly many more 1
Why do we need to be able to taste our food? 4
There is more to it: Sensory science, taste, smell, aroma, flavor, mouthfeel, texture, and chemesthesis 5
Is there a taste map of the tongue? 7
Why are some foods more palatable than others? 8
A few words about proteins, amino acids, nucleotides, nucleic acids, and enzymes 9
Glutamic acid, glutamate, and the glutamate ion 11
Glutamic acid and glutamate in our food 12
How does glutamate taste, and how little is required for us to taste it? 13

THE FIRST FOUR: SOUR, SWEET, SALTY, AND BITTER 15
The physiology and biochemistry of taste 15
The interplay between sweet and bitter 16
Taste receptors: This is how they work 17
When words fail us: Descriptions of tastes 20

THE FIFTH TASTE: WHAT IS UMAMI? 23
Science, soup, and the search for the fifth taste 23
Glutamic acid and glutamate 24
What is the meaning of the word umami? 26
From laboratory to mass production 27
How MSG is made 28
A little letter with a huge impact:
The 'Chinese restaurant syndrome' 32
The Japanese discover other umami substances 34
It all starts with mother's milk 35

Umami as a global presence 36
Umami has won acceptance as a distinct taste 38
And umami is still controversial ... 39

1 + 1 = 8: GUSTATORY SYNERGY 41
Amazing interplay: Basal and synergistic umami 41
Detecting umami synergy on the tongue and in the brain 42
Japanese dashi: The textbook example of umami synergy 43
The art of making Japanese dashi 45
Nordic dashi 47
Dashi closer to home—a Japanese soup with a Scandinavian twist 48
Seaweeds enhance the umami in fish 52
How to make smoked shrimp heads 53
Many substances interact synergistically with umami 54
A breakthrough discovery of yet another synergistic substance 54
The interplay between glutamate and the four classic tastes 55
A simple taste test: Umami vs. salt 56
Umami-rich ‘foie gras from the sea’ 57
Food pairing and umami 60
Creating tastes synthetically 60
Umami: Either as little or as much as you like 62

UMAMI FROM THE OCEANS: SEAWEEDS, FISH, AND SHELLFISH 65
Seaweeds and konbu: The mother lode of umami 65
A world of konbu in Japan 66
Fresh fish and shellfish 69
Cooked fish and shellfish dishes and soups 69
Umami and the art of killing a fish 72
A traditional clambake:
New England method, Danish ingredients 74
Everyday umami in ancient Greece and Rome 79
Fish sauces and fish pastes  81
Modern garum  85
Shellfish paste  87
Oyster sauce  87
Sushi and fermented fish  88
Katsuobushi  90
Catching katsuo to optimize umami  91
Niboshi  91
The hardest foodstuff in the world  92
Kusaya  96
Nordic variations: Horrible smells and heavenly tastes  96
Fish roe  98
Seven friends, The Compleat Angler, and a pike  100

UMAMI FROM THE LAND: FUNGI AND PLANTS  105
Umami from the plant kingdom  105
Dried fungi  110
Fermented soybeans  111
Soy sauce  112
Production of shōyu  113
Miso  114
Production of miso  114
The Asian answer to cheese: Fermented soybean cakes  118
Nattō  120
Black garlic  122
Shōjin ryōri: An old tradition with a modern presence  122
The enlightened kitchen  124
Tomatoes  126
Green tea  134

UMAMI FROM LAND ANIMALS: MEAT, EGGS, AND DAIRY PRODUCTS  137
The animal kingdom delivers umami in spades  137
Homo sapiens is a cook  140
Preserving meats in the traditional ways  142
Air-dried hams  143
Salted beef: Pastrami and corned beef  144
Bacon and sausages  145
Dairy products  146
Blue cheeses  146
Aged, dried, and hard cheeses  148
Eggs and mayonnaise  151
Harry’s crème from Harry’s Bar  151

UMAMI: THE SECRET BEHIND THE HUMBLE SOUP STOCK  155
Soup is umami  155
Osmazome and The Physiology of Taste  158
Amino acids in soup stocks  160
A real find: A dashi bar  160
The taste of a beef stock  162
Ready-made umami  164
Knorr and Maggi: European umami pioneers  165

MAKING THE MOST OF UMAMI  167
MSG as a food additive  167
Other commercial sources of umami  168
Hydrolyzed protein  169
Umami in a jar  170
Yeast extract  172
Nutritional yeast  172
More sources of umami for vegans  173
Ketchup  174
Bagna càuda  175
Worcestershire sauce  176
Umami in a tube  177
Twelve easy ways to add umami  178
Quintessentially Danish: Brown gravy, medisterpølse, and beef patties  180
Slow cooking: The secret of more umami  182
Ratatouille and brandade  190
This is why fast food tastes so good  191
Green salads and raw vegetables  194
Umami in dishes made with small fowl  196
Cooked potatoes: Nothing could be simpler  197
Rice and sake  197
Beer  200
Umami in sweets  202
Mirin is a sweet rice wine with umami  203
Contents

UMAMI AND WELLNESS 207
Umami and MSG: Food without 'chemicals' 207
Umami satisfies the appetite 209
Why does umami make us feel full?
The 'brain' in the stomach 209
Umami for a sick and aging population 210
Umami for life 211

EPILOGUE: UMAMI HAS COME TO STAY 213

TECHNICAL AND SCIENTIFIC DETAILS 217
Umami and the first glutamate receptor 217
Yet another receptor for umami 218

BIBLIOGRAPHY 233
ILLUSTRATION CREDITS 237
GLOSSARY 239
INDEX 255

THE PEOPLE BEHIND THE BOOK 264

Recipes

Potato water dashi with smoked shrimp heads 53
Monkfish liver au gratin with crabmeat and vegetables 58
Pearled spelt, beets, and lobster 70
Crab soup 76
Clambake in a pot 78
Patina de pisciculis 82
Garum 86
Quick-and-easy garum 86
Smoked quick-and-easy garum 87
Seriously old-fashioned sourdough rye bread 107
Anchovies, grilled onions, sourdough bread, pata negra ham, and mushrooms 108
Deep-fried eggplants with miso (nasu dengaku) 115
White asparagus in miso with oysters, cucumber oil, and small fish 116
Grilled shōjin kabayaki: ‘fried eel’ made from lotus root 123
Baked monkfish liver with raspberries and peanuts 128
Slow-roasted sauce with tomatoes, root vegetables, and herbs 130
Fried mullet with baked grape tomatoes, marinated sago pearls, and black garlic 132
Mushrooms, foie gras, and mushroom essence 138
Parmesan biscuits with bacon and yeast flakes 150
Harry’s crème 152
Chicken bouillon 157
Green pea soup with scallops and seaweed 163
Dressing with nutritional yeast 173
Eggplant gratinée with garlic, anchovies, and nutritional yeast 174
Oysters au gratin with a crust of nutritional yeast and smoked shrimp head powder 175
Bagna càuda 176
Old-fashioned Danish medisterpølse 181
Beef patties, Danish style 183
Chicken Marengo 185
Cassoulet 186
Beef estofado 188
Sicilian ratatouille 190
Brandade with air-dried ham and green peas 191
Three-day pizza with umami—not really a ‘fast food’ 192
Quail pâté 196
Risotto 197
Oxtails braised in wheat beer 201
Umami sorbet with maccha and tomato 202
White chocolate cream, black sesame seeds, Roquefort, and brioche with nutritional yeast 203